Diamondhead complex 'moving forward'

BY RICHARD MEEK

Plans for Johnson Manor, a proposed multi-family retirement complex Diamondhead, are "absolutely moving forward" according to one of the project's developers.

But the 100-unit complex faces a future that is anything but certain. The Echo has learned the Mississippi Home Corporation denied necessary tax credits for construction of the project.

However, Kurt Busching, a Jackson resident who said he is developer, said he is "looking forward to meeting with appropriate groups and authorities and getting the help to plan the complex."

The Echo first reported Thursday that Affordable Developer, which lists Pass Christian realtor John Ellis as its president, applied to the Mississippi Home Corporation for tax credits to "construct a 100-unit low income housing project located Diamondhead, Ms.," according to a letter MHC forwarded to Supervisors.

Robert Collier of MHC told the Echo Thursday that Affordable Developer's tax . Aug. 15-31. credit application has been denied on the grounds of "feasibility." He said a letter was sent to Affordable Developer in late March notifying the company of the decision.

Collier said Affordable may re-apply but as of Friday had not taken such action.

Collier said the developer has an April 28 deadline to re-28 being the deadline for the second cycle.

Collier said the third cycle is 031396

Busching denied comment on the status of the company's application. He did say he was told by MHC that "there were no tax credits available for the first cycle."

Collier said some tax credits were issued for the first cycle but Affordable's was denied because all of the requirements were not met. He acknowledged that the "threshold requirements," were met, but not "feasibility requirements."

Collier said the threshold requirements for any application are "site control, appropri-ate zoning, an established need for a project and the ability for the applicant to secure appropriate financing."

He said that with the numbers presented to MHC, including "cash flow and projected income" the "application was not approved for feasibility."

"There was a lot of number crunching (by MHC staff) and it wasn't acceptable," Collier

Ruling may open casino developments

BY MARY G. SEILEY

The Bay St. Louis legal counsel on casino matters said last week a recent Mississippi Supreme Court ruling could open the door for more casinos in Hancock County.

Attorney Donald Rafferty said the high court's opinion that outlawed a site proposed by Gold Strike and Lone Star casinos next to the DuPont plant in Harrison County could have major ramifications local-

Specifically, Rafferty said the ruling may in effect give the nod to a casino that was long ago proposed in Bayou Caddy waters, proposed by Terry M. Ladner. The Gaming Commission refused to approve that site, but a state court judge said the site is legal.

The Gaming Commission appealed the Ladner case to Supreme Court v has lingered for a year.

Meanwhile, developers proposed putting two casinos in a man-made waterway off the Bay of St. Louis, connected to the Bay by a 1,200-foot canal.

Waveland Police have taken the first step in what chief Jimmy Varnell hopes is a crackdown of illegal dumping in Waveland Cemetery.

Varnell said police arrested 59-year-old John B. Montgomery of 507 Morris Rd. for violating City Ordinance 232, which prohibits the dumping of trash.

However, Varnell said one arrest is only a symptom of a larger problem.

"People have been using (the cemetery) as a dumping place," Varnell said. "We know there's (than more Montgomery) and we will continue to try and catch them."

Varnell said police have been watching the cemetery closely during the past few weeks and Montgomery "happened to be there.

No court date has been set. Varnell also chided a recent Times-Picayune report that said violent crime in Waveland doubled in 1994. He said the Picayune was quoting the total number of crimes in Waveland, figures released by the Mississippi Gulf Coast Crime Commission.

"(The Times-Picayune) took the figures out of context," Varnell said.

He said violent crimes have stayed the same or dropped.

Figures released by the Waveland Police confirm Varnell. Armed robbery rose from one in 1993 to three in 1994, the only violent crime that increased. Assaults were at 72, the same as 1993, and domestic family problems dropped from 346 to 283.

Building a playground

Four Seabees from the 20th Naval Construction Regiment, the U.S. Atlantic Fleet, stationed in Gulfport, constructed a playground set for students at Waveland Elementary School. The set, which costs $5,295 and was paid for with Parent Teacher Organization and school district funds, includes two slides and a "curly climber", according to school principal Debbie Cox. Seabses Steven Hind, Jeff Faulkenberry, Bill Bush and Kevin Turner spent two days assembling the set. (Soho staff photo-in Richard Meek)

DR. JAMES J. BELL Dr. James J. Bell, 78, of Gulfport died Wednesday, April 19, 1995, in Gulfport. Dr. Bell was a native of Grand Falls, New Brunswick, Canada, and was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, Disabled American Veterans and Temple Baptist Church.

Dr. Bell joined the Marine Corps in 1942 and received his boot camp training at Parris Island, S.C., and his infantry training at Camp Lejeune, N.C. He was assigned to the 4th Marine Division and participated in the invasion of Spain, where he was wounded for the second time and received the Purple Heart. He also was part of the invasion on Iwo Jima and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for Gallantry in Action. He returned to the States and attended and graduated from the National College of Chiropractic in Chicago and later went to work for Motorola from which he retired after 30 years.

Magic officials push for road extension

Casino Magic officials pushed Thursday for county, city and state help in seeing Casino Magic Drive extended to Highway 90.

The project has been proposed for years, but stalled in negotiations over casino rightof-way through a large tract of land owned by the Stechmann

More

Officials, including Sen. William Johnson, and Reps. J.P. Compretta and Harry Frierson, agreed to meet again May 1 with Bay St. Louis and Hancock County Board of Supervisors concerning the project.

That session possibly could lead to a county request to have the proposed roadway added to the state aid system, a step that would clear the way for detailed state highway studies of construction, and, eventually, to state help in building the route.

While the Board of Supervisors didn't take any action -they were meeting in an informal "workshop" session - most of the members said they prefer Casino Magic's proposed route over other alternatives for, relieving Blue Meadow Road congestion.

City of Bay St. Louis officials several months ago had an engineering study done of potential widening of Blue Meadow, all the way to Joe's Bayou Road. The preliminary study, however, showed the cost of such a project would be far beyond the city's financial capacity.

Thursday, officials looked at those widening plans as one possible state aid project. But they appeared to agree that a better solution to Blue Meadow congestion would be constructing a new link to Highway 90.

Casino Magic's J.B. Rose, senior director of development, said the casino's plans to begin construction of a golf course

June 1, and possible additional hotel accommodations later this year, are part of Casino Magic's commitment to create a full-scale resort complex.

That, he said, is going to lead to an increase in traffic on Blue Meadow, with other escalations on Highway 90. Officials noted that the section of Blue Meadow which connects Casino Magic Drive and Highway 90 passes Bay High School. In addition, there are plans for expanding recreation facilities in the area.

Bay St. Louis recently completed a project creating a thirdlane for that section of Blue Meadow.

But with Casino Magic's plans for expansion coming to fruition now, officials said that improvement probably won't be enough to accommodate the upcoming traffic.

Rose then reviewed Casino Magic's various proposed routes to extend Casino Magic Drive to a direct connection with Highway 90.

He said there appears to be a "solution that's good for everybody" in resolving the impasse the casino has met in acquiring a right-of-way for the casino's favored route to Highway 90. He declined to elaborate on the part of that "solution" involving Casino Magic financial negotiations. He did say that part of making a breakthrough is getting an city or county pledge to resolve serious drainage problems that affect part of the Stechmanns' acerage. A nearby parcel of land reportedly was used as a major debris dump following Hurricane Camille in 1969. In the years since then, a lack of drainage apparently has transformed some of the Stechmann land in to wetlands. Public works officials took a stab at correcting the drtainage problem last year -- but federal environmental officals wouldn't allow workers access to deal with the drainage area.

State highway officials said while the proposed route may encounter some permit problems, generally a compromise can be reached through wetlands mitigation for such a project.

Johnson said he. Compretta and Frierson want to work next session in the Legislature to help improve Casino Magic's access while lessening the dangers to students at Bay Highwy.

But Johnson said the local legislators need a feeling from city and county officials on what's the best way to proceed: getting state aid to widen the existing route or to build the new link to Highway 90.

Several members of the Board of Supervisors endorsed the concept of constructing the route Casino Magic prefers They also expressed reluctance, however, at putting such a major project in the state aid hopper, with three of the five members of the board not seeking re-election.

The next discussion session was set for 1:30 p.m. May 1 at the Hancock County Court-

Hancock joins Harrison in plea for tax action

BY MARY G. SEILEY Hancock County Board of Supervisors heeded a dire warning from their attorney Monday, and agreed to push for clarification of the property tax liability of barge-based casinos. The board agreed to join with Harrison County's request for a special session of the Legislature to deal with the issue.

They took that action at the request of attorney Gerald Gex, who raised concerns over a lawsuit President Riverboat Casino filed in Harrison County. President officials contend state law exempts "all tow-boats, tugboats and barges documented under the laws of the United States" from Mississippi taxes.

"It has been a nightmare to me since the first time the issue was raised," Gex said of the lawsuit.

Since the two casinos in Hancock County are constructed on barges, a success by the President in Harrison County could have drastic impact on tax revenues here.

Jubilee Casino already is contesting the amount of the county assessment on its properties -- the county contends the casino owes $407,000 in taxes but the casino puts the figure at some $90,000.

Casino Magic in Bay St. Louis, meanwhile, paid almost $800,000 in taxes without

In other matters this week, the board agreed to have appraisals done on two properties it wants to buy, including a building to house the county school board administrative offices on Highway 603, and the former U.S. Post Office building on Main Street in Bay St. Louis.

The downtown structure would be used to house court and administrative functions which are now cramped in the nearby Courthouse.

City of Bay St. Louis officials had negotiated for purchase of the Main Street structure, currently owned by Chuck Ramsey, but reached no purchase price accord.

A three-day workshop providing information on child-care businesses will be held April 29, May 20 and June 17 at the Pepsi Cola Plant on Dedeaux Road in Gulfport.

Sponsored by the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, the Child Care As A Business Workshop is designed for those who have already established, or are interested in establishing a child-care business. Shirley W. Wiltshire, Pearl

River County Extension home economist, said the workshop "will focus on developing skills to make child-care businesses professional and profitable."

Child-care professionals, along with Extension educators and business professionals, will participate on the program. Topics to be covered include business awareness, marketing directions and management essentials for child-care business owners.

Specific discussions will touch on business regulations, pricing, financial records and taxes, professionalism, health, safety and illness management issues, child guidance and discipline, parent and employee communication skills and more.

Cost of the workshop is $30 for three sessions or $12 per session.

For information and/or application call 467-5456. Applications are due by April 26.

Strahan announces for district supervisor

I, Dwight F. Strahan, would like to take this opportunity to formally announce my candidacy for supervisor, District 5, Hancock County, on the Democratic ticket.

I am the son of the late Stanley C. Strahan and Lucille Harris. I was raised in Logtown until the NASA acquisition. I attended Bay High for three years and finished high school in Picayune.

I served three years in the military, two tours in Vietnam, where I was decorated for valor. I am a Master Mason, Knight Templer and a Nobel of Joppa Shrine Temple.

I am married to the former Deborah Cuevas, daughter of Ellis "Buck" Cuevas and Joyce Cuevas. We reside at 6725 Dummyline Road. I worked offshore for 23 years as a marine engineer, and the past seven years at Stennis Space Center for Johnson Controls as a Marine Maintenance Technician. I am not a politician. I am a concerned private individual who is convinced that the taxpayer is not receiving the proper benefits for the taxes he has

I also believe that due to the Republican Congress cuts and restructuring that the state and county tax bases will have to undergo drastic changes. It will become imperative that our tax dollars be spent as wisely as possible to offset any county tax increase.

I cannot and will not give the voters of District 5 promises I may not or cannot keep. I do not consider my fellow voters foolhardy as to believe any promises that may have been made by my opponents. We all know that budget constraints in the next four years will limit the board as to what has to be done in our district and the county's interest. The board must aggressively seek industry to provide jobs for county men and women to decrease unemployment and increase Hancock County's tax base. We have to use the Hancock County and separate district educational system to educate adults on welfare to learn skills, whereby they can reestablish themselves in gainful employment.

Dwight F. Strahan

What I will promise the voters of District 5, if you choose me as your next supervisor, is that you will be honorably and honestly represented by me. And I will continuously take council with you, the voters of District 5. I hope to meet each and everyone of you before the election. Your vote and support will be greatly appreciated.

CUEVAS' QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

Congratulations are in order for the businesses and industries recognized at the 9th annual Salute to Business and Industry held Friday.

The event is sponsored by the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission, Hancock County Board of Supervisors and Hancock County Chamber of Commerce.

The Award of Excellence went to GE Plastics at Port Bienville Industrial Park.

GE Plastics is one of the key industries located at Port Bienville and contributes much to the economy of the county with direct and indirect employment.

Industry of the Year honors went to Calgon Carbon Corporation.

Calgon Carbon is one of the newer industries located at Port Bienvielle Industrial Park and plays an important role in our areas economic growth. Kmart, Waveland, was honored as the Hancock County Business of the Year. Kmart has been located in the county for 15 years and has made many contributions to the community. Alcan Cable was selected as the Bay St. Louis Business of the Year. Alcan Cable manufacturers aluminum cables and has been providing employment in Bay St. Louis since 1974.

Monti Electric Supply, Inc., received Waveland's Business of the Year honors.

Monti Electric is a locally-owned business started in 1977 which has expanded to Ocean Springs. The electrical supply distributor serves the Mississippi and Louisiana Gulf Coast.

Taking honors also as the Diamondhead Business of the Year, is the Diamondhead Supermarket, Diamondhead Supermarket is the anchor business of Diamondhead business district and contributes much to the community and area.

The full-line supermarket has an employment of 43 and offers specialized services to its customers including home delivery.

I congratulate each of the above industries and businesses and wish them continued success in the years to come. It is great to see those who are doing a good job are recognized.

Big doings will be going on at the Hancock County Courthouse on Thursday at 5 p.m.

The Exchange Club of Hancock County will be rededicating a Freedom Shrine at the courthouse in conjunction with the 10 anniversary of the Hancock County Exchange Club.

The members of The National Exchange Club, a national service organization, have nearly 11,000 Freedom Shrines in schools, military installations and governmental buildings since the program's inception in

The program will include the Exchange Club members, Bay High JR ROTC, governmental heads and entertainment by The Bay Four and After Barbershop

I am told the presentation will be for about 30 minutes.

I hope to see you at the Hancock County Courthouse on Thursday evening.

EYES ON MISSISSIPPI

By Bill Minor

Fordice, Molpus send barbs at each other

For governor's races I've seen (12 of them) the opening verbal salvos of the 1995 battle. between Kirk Fordice and Dick Molpus the other day was better political theater with a higher level of discourse than I've been accustomed to hearing.

Considering that the audience—the Mississippi Economic Council annual meeting was an overwhelmingly Republican one, this was not neutral territory as far as Democrat Molpus was concerned. But this is a more sedate class of Republicans and they were courteous to Molpus, but they managed to laugh most at the barbs thrown by Fordice, their obvious favorite in this matchup.

Some deference, of course, had to be shown to Molpus, since he had a business background before he entered state government in 1980, and his father was one of the founders of the MEC. And if merit badges were being passed out by the MEC, then certainly Molpus deserved one of their brighest, because he, as Secretary of State, became the first state official who finally ended the outrageous 16th Seciton school land "penny leases" which for decades had been a prime MEC

However, this day was the political arena and passed merit points didn't seem to count as much.

That Molpus did come off as well as he did in this environment and also against a cocky, confident Fordice, was something of an accomplishment, in what seems certain to be a fascinating political race.

The explosive part of the debate came quite early on when Fordice paraded his wife Pat with him to appear as an exhibit to show that they are back together, lovey dovey, after their public blow-up two years ago. Sadly, Pat, being hauled up to the debate platform with him, reminded one of an indentured servant being led to the auction block. Fordice quickly became very defensive about his marriage situation, intimating that it had been introduced in a "cheap shot" by Molpus in a speech he made earlier this year on the Coast. The term "irreconcilable differences" immediately came into play, this being the key words Fordice himself had declared in a written statement from the governor's office on April 8, 1993, that he and his wife had. Molpus, it turns out, had said merely in response to a question to a Gulf Coast audience three months ago that "irreconcilable differences" existed between him and Fordice on such issues as education, etc. Molpus stood his ground on making the remark, but only in the context that he meant the differences between him and Fordice on certain public issues. He added that "your personal life is just that — it's your personal life and it's not part of this campaign.'

Promptly Fordice interjected: "Then stay out of it," a remark that seemed to elicit a sympathy murmer from the crowd. A bit of sharp repartee followed until Molpus evoked a laugh from the crowd by asking, "Is this my time or the governor's time?'

Several of the TV sound bites of the debate, as well as news stories, focused on the marital episode, giving an edge to Forus maignation gambit. The fact remains that Fordice introduced the subject both two years ago as well as in the debate. Some might naturally glean from the Fordice reaction that the man protests too much.

Why Fordice entered a public debate with Molpus in the first place is something to ponder since conventional political wisdom says that an incumbent who is leading in the polls doesn't debate his challenger. This probably indicates just how cocky Fordice is and how sure he is of controlling the gubernatorial rhetoric.

Fordice pulled out one of the old Ronald Reagan tricks from Reagan's debate with Jimmy Carter: "There you go again," and used it on Molpus. And, of course, as expected, Fordice did the mock slip-of-the-tongue by calling Molpus, at one point, "Mr. Mabus."

On substance, Molpus showed his command of the facts about what is happening in the state, and a better knowledge of state government, than Fordice, who after more than three years in office, still doesn't seem to care much about how the institution of government works. Fordice obviously is ready to take all the credit for the state's strong economy without conceding what the new gaming industry (something that Fordice said he opposed when he took office) as well as the excellent economic recovery nationally under the Clinton administration, has to do with improving the state's economy.

However, Molpus made clear that he is ready with the facts to challenge Fordice on the economic front, and will accuse Fordice of trying to take the state "back to where we used to be" and polarizing the state along class and racial lines. At least for the initial jousting, Molpus managed to keep Fordice from invoking national politics (and the name of Bill Clinton) into the debate. No one expects that is going to last very long, though.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

My mother, the Holy Catholic Church and Ellis Cuevas

As I arose from my impromptu car mat kneeler, the knees of my blue jeans sodden from the rain-soaked earth, I realized that my mother, the Holy Roman Catholic Church and Ellis Cuevas had something in common — behavior modification through guilt. Understand that it wasn't my fault that the headlight burned out. It was a natural casualty of time and use.

But when in the early morning my mother pointed out that my headlight was out, the conventional burden of guilt imposed by years of droning on about "one-eyed bandits" in the editorial column by Ellis Cuevas was so immediate and intense that my mother's and my eyes met in horror. We gasped a soprano duet of "O God! What if Ellis sees you/me!"

After work it was rush to the auto parts that was still open before the sun set and back to the shop for allen wrench and phillips crew driver.

As the sky started hurling its early warning missiles announcing the impending storm and splattering my face, I frantically changed out the headlights of my car.

It took all of about five minutes.

Immediately the relief was intense—and that from a good

Thank God. Now I can drive home without worrying where-Ellis might be lurking with his tally sheet looking for the abusers of vehicular luminescence. Does he cruise the back streets? the highway? or does he just Does he realize some people may be innocent of having but one headlight? Or does he think "expose them all and let God sort out the innocent?"

As I stood under the overhang of my shop's back door I looked at the brightly gleaming headlights through the now pouring rain. Turning back into the shop to put up my tools I felt the stiff wetness of the knees of my blue jeans and thought, "Gosh. That was almost as good as Lent.'

FROM THE SENATE

By Senator Trent Lott

A down payment on a balanced budget

Just prior to adjourning for have claimed. But it will help the Easter holiday, the Senate made its first down payment toward reducing the size and scope of the federal government. After a week-long struggle of negotiations and difficult floor maneuvering, we approved $16 billion in cuts in unnecessary spending for this

What is most significant is that its consideration signifies a fundamental commitment by the Senate to reassess every federal program and reduce federal expenditures.

We eventually cut unspent funds for such things as housing, duplicative job training programs, transportation, energy, federal administrative and travel costs, and cleanup and redevelopment of closed military bases.

But we restored some funds for Head Start and other education programs, as well as those providing heating assistance for low-income persons.

The bill also replenishes the Federal Emergency Management Agency budget by providing $6.7 billion in new spending for disaster relief efforts including those which have occurred recently in California.

Coming from a state which has been severely impacted by natural disasters and knows the importance of this emergency aid being there at the right me, I supported this provision.

Considering that the $16 billion rescission package represents a one percent reduction of the entire federal budget, it is hardly a draconian reduction in government spending as some reduce the federal deficit, free up economic resources for the economy, and job creation in particular. Each dollar that Washington does not spend on government programs means $1 more that families because it is not going to pay the national debt. And I know that individual Americans can make better spending decisions for their money than the federal government.

This package is only a small example of the kind of reductions in the growth rate of government spending that will be required to balance the budget.

According to the Congressional Budget Office, if we simply limit annual spending increases to 2.9 percent between now and the year 2002, we can balance the budget. Achieving a balanced budget requires not absolute cuts in government spending, but rather reductions in the rate of growth of government

In May the Senate will take up the 1996 budget where, again, all federal spending will come under scrutiny. We have made a food faith start in bringing down the deficit and getting the budget under control. We need to stay the course.

Senator Lott welcomes any questions and/or comments about this column. Please write to: Senator Trent Lott, 487 Russell Building, Washington, D.C. 20510 (Attention: Press Office).

BREWER'S WORLD

By Jimmie Brewer

It happened on a hot and humid midwestern summer day. The year was 1972, and the thermometer, wired to the back of the chainlink dug-out, showed a clear 100 degrees. It was near the end of the Little League season, and we were playing the Indians, a team we had already beaten twice and no threat to our firstplace position. It would turn out to be one of those moments that sticks with you for the rest of your life.

We were batting in the bottom of the fifth inning. I was occupying my normal position, the far left side of the pine, monitoring the water jug and carefully arranging the bats as they returned to the dug-out.

Our team was ahead 9 to 2, and I began to fill with a little bit of nervous excitement as I knew I had a good chance of playing when our team was safely in the lead.

As I dangled my feet over the bench, stirring up dust, I glanced at my Dad... (whoops, I mean coach), who was standing in the coaching box next to first

With one out in the inning, the coach caught my glance and gave the signal for me to bat next.

A rush of adrenaline filled my veins, and butterflies attacked my insides as I leaped from the back of the bench and headed for the bats.

I selected my favorite 27 oz. Johnny Bench bat and grabbed an oversized batting helmet as I strutted out to the on-deck My teammate at the plate had run the count to three balls and two strikes. The next pitch was singled to right field, and I knew once again I had my big Hearing the encouragement from my team, I knocked the dust of my Kmart tennis shoes and took my place in the bat-ter's box. The red-headed, freckled-faced pitcher delivered his first pitch.

"Strike one," bellowed the umpire from behind the plate. Disgruntled, I stepped away from the plate to gain my composure. Again I hear the bench cheering me on, and with renewed confidence I took my place and glared at the pitcher as he started his wind-up. It was another fast ball. With the bat clenched tightly in my hands and my eyes surely closed, I swung with all my might.

"Crack" was the sound it made when the ball connected with the wooden bat.

Stunned and shocked I stood still and watched as the ball made its way past the pitcher and headed for second base.

Then, like a scared rabbit I dropped the bat and took off for first base.

The fielder caught the ball, and much to my delight, decided to go to second for the force-out.

Double plays in Little League are nearly unheard of, so I eased up on my stride and anticipated what it would be like to be a base runner.

To my dismay the swifthanded shortstop made the play at second and wheeled and threw to first base.

With arms outstretched I threw myself head first onto the hard, dusty, hot surface and groped for the bag.

Through the swirling dust and chaos I could see the umpire with his thumb high in Baseball fever

the air as he hollered, "You're didn't get enough votes: two of the four members of council present voted to approve the expenditure, including council President Charles Scianna and Thomas Favre.

Two others abstained, including James Thriffiley and Tad Black, leaving the proposal dead in the water. The fifth member of council, James Rutherford, was absent.

Black was the only outspoken opponent. He protested the travel would be a waste of money with no practical or tangible benefit to the residents of Bay St. Louis.

Black said his constituents have more pressing concerns than international trade rela-tions, such as pothole repairs.

Scianna argued that long term benefits of such interactions are less tangible than pothole repair. Contacts made by Bay St. Louis officials through mingling with powerful, out-of-city officials, he said, do immeasurable good in the

After council's surprising rejection of Favre's request, Scianna sought to revisit the issue and win council's okay for the trip. Black left his seat at the council table at that point, died there. Almost.

After the meeting, Favre said he was "disappointed and discourged" by council's position, but not surprised. Recongition that Bay St. Louis would receive by fostering contacts with governors from other states and Mexico would pay off in the long run, he said. But some members of council, he added, are "so narrow minded they can't see it."

Before the night ended, he popped off a shot at Thriffiley directly. Thriffiley had asked that council consider buying a new table for council members. so they would have more room to function during council meet-

Favre said no such expense was needed -- he suggested council spin its oblong table 180 degrees, giving a short-end slot to the president and leaving two long-sides available for the other four members of council. When Thriffiley said that suggestion should have been made a long time ago, Favre said he'd personally recommended the move months ago.

"I'm just trying to save enough money so I can go to Campechee," said the mayor. "What was the cost of that table?"

Despite the denial, Busching said the company "owns the land (which fronts Noma Drive) and has (proper) zoning. We are absolutely moving forward."

The owner of the 10.9-acre property is listed as JCE Commercial Properties, Inc., another Ellis-owned company. JCE purchased the property in Busching also disputed MHC's claim that the development was targeted for low income elderly. Rather, he called Johnson Manor "affordable elderly housing.

He said under MHC guidelines, a developer may apply for tax credits in three different areas, "low to very low income, low income and moderate income." He said Johnson Manor is a "moderate income" development that will target the elderly. He said the project is not a Housing and Urban Deve-lopment project or "Section 8

"We plan to build something as nice, if not nicer, than any-Diamondhead," Busch-ing said. According to figures obtained from Collier, the maxium income for the "low to moderate" category is $12,780 for a one-income household. The figures rises to $14,580 for a twoincome household.

He said HUD determines those incomes based on the median family income for a metropolitan area. The figure for the Gulf Coast area, which Diamondhead is governed by, is $30,400.

Busching admitted the income figures are "kind of low." "But when you are talking about the elderly, you are typically talking about retirees," who have various sources of income, Busching said.

He said the monthly rental for a two-bedroom apartment would be near $400, in the "low" $400s" for a three-bedroom apartment. He added those were base rents, and did not include any of the several options that will be offered, such as kitchen and laundry Busching, who has built simi-

Hospitality

marketing course set

A course designed to help industry firms improve their marketing skills will be offered twice during May at the University of Southern Mississippi-Gulf Coast.

"Hospitality Marketing at its Best," is a six-hour course that will incorporate Coast speakers and provide a comprehensive overview of hospitality marketing on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

The course will be taught May 3 from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. and May 27 from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Cost is $79 per participant, which covers all materials involved in the course. Discounts are available for companies sending more than one employee.

lar projects in Mississippi, Florida and Tennessee, said the complex will be fenced, and installed with a security system.

"You can drive up to any of our complexes, and not know the difference between it and the Coast's finest," he said. "We are not subsidized. We must attract market-type tenants."

Busching said he and Ellis are also building a similar project on North Street in Pass Christian. He said plans with the city have been approved.

"It will be the nicest thing in Pass Christian," Busching said. He said the three-bedroom apartments in the Pass Christian development will contain

"1,100 square feet and "all of the amenities." The Diamondhead property is located west of the Baptist Church and bounded on the south side by Noma Drive. The tract was sold with a deed restriction requiring it be developed with residential family development. It apparently does not preclude construction of a development for low income elderly residents.

On the further develop-ments, Paul Montjoy, general manager of the Diamondhead Property Owners Association, was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Supreme Court said state lawconcerning legal locations of casinos is flawed to the extent it describes gambling as legal in the southernmost waters of the state's southernmost counties. Since the counties' lines encompass the barrier islands, the Supreme Court said, actually no existing casino sites fit that definition.

But the Supreme Court took a more liberal interpretation of the Legislature's intent, saying the law was designed to allow casinos in the Gulf and the Sound, adjacent to the coastal counties.

If the high court agrees that Point Clear is a barrier island, said Rafferty, Ladner's site and several other potential casino sites on Bayou Caddy would become legal gaming sites.

In its first full year of competition the William Carey College Forensics Team has captured the sweepstakes award in the Mississippi Individual Events Championships. Colleges from across Mississippi competed April 7 and 8 on the Carey campus in a variety of speech events. Carey won first place in five of the ten events.

Leanne Bennett of Diamondhead won the Pentathlon Award, which is given to the individual who scores the most points in five events. She won first place in both Persuasive and Extemporaneus Speaking, second in Impromptu Speaking, and third in both Interpretation of Prose and Interpretation of

First place after-dinner speaking honors went to Jenny Deuschle of Bay St. Louis. She and Julie Barshinger of York, Pa. won first in Duo Dramatic Interpretation.

Pearlington student winner

Lynn Edward Smith Jr. of Pearlington is a winner of a special contest being conducted by the popular PBS game show Where In the World Is Carmen Sandiego?

Now in its fourth season on PBS, the Peabody and Emmy Award-winning series makes learning about geography fun for 6- to 13-year-olds. In each show, contestants (a.k.a. "gumshoes") track the crafty crook Carmen Sandiego and her gang of no-good goons, who have made off with one of the world's landmarks or other treasures.

Smith won the contest by submitting the names of four of these "loots" — as they are known to Carmen Sandiego fans — and the places from which they were stolen by Carmen Sandiego and her crew. As a reward for his diligence. his name will appear on screen on the Carmen Sandiego show on Mississippi ETV May 8.

The contest will run through September 1995, with 25 viewers winning nationwide each week. Other Carmen Sandiego fans who wish to enter must write down on a postcard. the names of four "loots" and the corresponding locations from which they were stolen, include viewer's name and address, and send it off to: ACME Crimenet, P.O. Box 4300, New York, NY 10163.

Correct entries will be chosen at random and viewers may enter as often as they wish.

Where In the World Is Carmen Sandiego? airs Monday through Friday at 3:30 p.m. and Saturdays at 11:30 a.m. on Mississippi ETV.

OLA student has poem published

Donna Webb, senior at Our Lady Academy has just had a selection published by Saint Mary's Press of Winona, Minn. in a collection of prayers by teenagers entitled More Dreams Alive.

The prayers in More Deams Alive come from all over the United States and touch on issues and feelings at the heart of teenage life. Like its predecessor, Dreams Alive, the bock contains honest, articulate, optimistic and anxious prayers, reflecting the insight and humor with which teeagers keep their dreams alive.

Entitled "Wanted," Webb's prayer is about friends. "I chose to submit this poem," said Webb, because everyone needs a friend at one time or another."

Webb became interested in writing poetry through her love for music. She currently plays the guitar.

'I have kept a diary or journal since about the second grade," said Webb, "and I always think of my writing as lyrics for songs.

Over the last three years, Webb has written about 250 poems, many of which she has shared in her classes and in literary magazine From Within at Our Lady Academy.

"I write not necessarily for myself, but for other people." said Webb. "Anyone can get different meanings out of my Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Webb of Pass Christian, Webb will graduate from OLA in May and is interested in majoring in music performance and journalism in college.

More Dreams Alive (ISBN 0-88489-321-9, 6 x 9, 105 pages, paper, $4.95) is edited by Carl Koch and available in many bookstores or directly through the publisher (Saint Mary's Press, 702 Terrace Heights, Winona, MN 55987-1320; the toll-free number is 1-800-533-8095)

More Dreams Alive makes an excellent gift for graduations, confirmations, birthdays and other special occasions for celebrating with teenagers, Teachers and youth ministers will find More Dreams Alive helpful for classroom prayer, retreats and youth group meetings.

Someone who will talk to me, Let me listen, let me learn. Wanted:

Someone who will listen to me, A kind ear that will not turn. Wanted:

Someone to say "It's all right," Who will be there when the nightmare stops Wanted:

Someone to say "I love you," Who will help fill the emptiness inside. Wanted:

Someone whom I can trust, Someone who will stay by my side.

Wanted: A pair of arms willing to give

A voice to whisper, "The nightmare will end," A hand to wipe the tears away. Wanted: A friend.

Help teen-agers avoid sexual situations

The health educator provided the following prac-

* Avoid secluded places. Stay away from isolated locations such as parks or deserted beaches. Suggest meeting in public places where help will be nearby if you need it.

* Have your own transportation. Don't rely on your date for transportation (especially if you don't know him well). Drive your own car or use public transportation, if possible. Or, go out with a group and double date with another couple.

* Beware of alcohol and other drugs. More than 50 percent of all reported rapes are related to alcohol use by one or both persons. It's much more difficult to be in control of a situation if you're under the influence of these substances, warns Barkett.

What's the Meaning of This?

Behind almost every name is a meaning. This goes for names of states, too. Below is a list of some states and how they got their names.

•North Dakota: This state's name means "friend" or "ally" to the Sioux Indians.

•Maine: At first, Maine was a French territory, and its name meant "province." •Pennsylvania: One of the original 13 colonies, Pennsylvania was named after its founder, William Penn. •Ohio: To the Iroquois Indians, the word "Ohio" means great," "fine" or "good river." •Florida: When Ponce de Leon was in search of the Fountain of Youth, he named this area "flowery Easter" on Easter Sunday, 1513. •Montana: This name was derived from a Latin word that:

means mountainous. •Alabama: This land was once the home of the Alabama or Alibamon Indians of the Creek Confederacy. •Georgia: Georgia was named after King George II of England. He granted James Oglethorpe a charter to found the colony in 1732.

•Indiana: It is believed that English settlers named this terr.tory to mean "land of the Indians,"
